

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method for forming an array of viable cells is provided. In one embodiment, the method comprises ink-jet printing a cellular composition containing cells onto a substrate. Upon printing, at least about 25% of the cells remain viable after incubation for 24 hours at 37°C in a 5% CO₂ / 95% O₂ environment.